Invention A Postal Cabinet, 628/87-2966.
 Our illustration shows a cabinet for keeping postal stamps and postal requisites generally, which has recently been patented by Mr. Walter Holder, of Gresham Hotel, Upper Sackville Street, Dublin. In this cabinet the feature is that the drawers have a protecting lid or cover which prevents the possibility of documents, &c., getting over the sides or back of the drawers, an occurrence, which so easily happens with the drawers. The contents of the ordinary drawers are also kept clean and in order, while the lid opens and closes by the action of pulling out and pushing in the drawers. This is a new idea which should prove of considerable convenience to those whose correspondence is voluminous, and in these days of frequent postal communications a cabinet for this specific purpose should prove very popular.
